

Oral Segmenting Checklist

A child should begin with oral segmenting, i.e. saying the sounds in a word out loud. They don't need to know what the written letters and sounds (graphemes) look like at this stage.

- Begin by orally segmenting words made up of two phonemes, such as in (i-n), then three phonemes, such as cat (c-a-t) or shop (sh-o-p), before moving on to longer words.*
- Say the words several times before segmenting them.*
- Teach children to listen for the sounds in words by asking them to stretch or chop up the word.*
- Ask children to use their fingers to count the sounds they can hear.*
- Put the word back together (blend) to check that they have used the right sounds.*
- Frequently model how to segment a word and encourage children to look carefully at your mouth. This will help them to see the sounds being articulated clearly.*

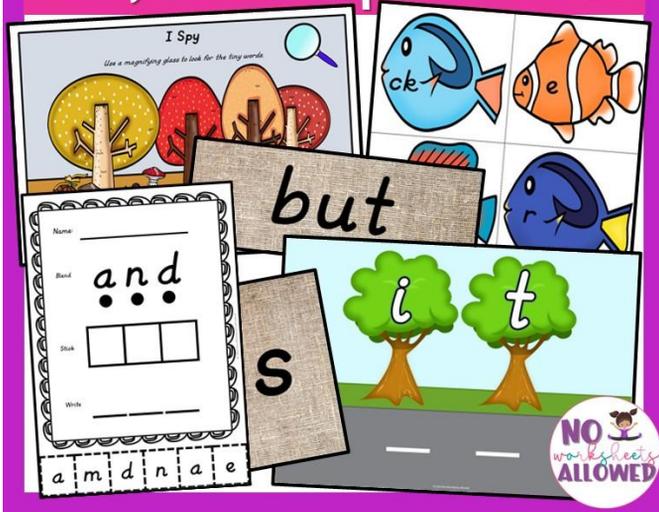

Segmenting to Spell Checklist

Once a child can confidently 'sound out' (orally segment), they can begin to represent the sounds with letters (graphemes).

- The simplest way for children to see the written word is by using magnetic letters. Initially, just give them the letters they need to make the word.
- Only focus on the sounds which the child has been taught so that they aren't overwhelmed. For example, if they have been taught s,a,t,p,i,n, they can build words such as in, it, is, sit, etc.
- Once a child is getting to grips with handwriting they can begin to write the words.
- Say the word and verbally 'stretch it out' or 'chop it up'.
- Say the sounds and write them down.
- Put the word back together (blend) to check that the right sounds have been used.
- Make learning hands-on and fun!
